Dr. Frank R. Burroughs was one of Ritzville's first physicians, who practiced there from 1889 to 1925. Town lore has it that Dr. Burroughs was passing through Ritzville by train in 1888, when a local medical emergency required him to stop there. The doctor liked Ritzville so much, he never got back on the train.

In his nearly 40 years of practice, Dr. Burroughs delivered about 5,000 babies. He was quite active in the community, serving at times as mayor and postmaster, as well as on the city council and library board. Dr. Burroughs' home was built from 1889-1890 and remodeled in 1902 when electricity came to Ritzville. After his family line ended in 1923, a nephew bequeathed the house to the city in 1962. From 1987-88, it was extensively refurbished by local volunteers and reopened as the Burroughs Museum.

The house survives today with few alterations and with much of the original wallpaper, floor coverings and furnishings intact.

Grand Coulee Dam measures 550 ft high and 5,223 ft long and is the world's third largest hydroelectric facility. The dam provides up to 6.5 million kilowatts of power and irrigates over half a million acres of farmland. The dam was constructed in 1933 by the Bureau of Reclamation for the main purpose of irrigation, but when World War II began, the need for power became more important, thus thrusting the Grand Coulee Dam into one of the world's largest hydroelectric facilities. There are guided tours daily of the Third Power House, where the hydroelectric units can be viewed.

COULEE DAM'S HISTORIC WALK

The town of Coulee Dam has a history rich in stories of the building of the mighty Grand Coulee Dam. From the well-planned Engineers' Town to an entire section of Mason City that was moved to make way for construction, Coulee Dam holds a vast treasure of information just waiting to be explored. Start at the Visitor Arrival Center and follow the signs throughout the short excursion into the past. The trip through time is presented by the town of Coulee Dam. Maps available.

LASER LIGHT SHOW AT GRAND COULEE DAM

It is one of the largest entertainment laser projection systems in the world. The laser light show at Grand Coulee Dam tells the story of the Columbia River and how its power was harnessed to provide multiple benefits to mankind, including electrical power, irrigation for farming, flood control and exciting recreational opportunities. The "narrator" of Grand Coulee Dam's laser light stage is the mighty Columbia River itself. Looking back over its ancient past, the river describes those dramatic events that led to the carving of the Grand Coulee, the building of an immense dam to hold back its rushing waters, and the use of the river to reclaim a desert. The free show runs nightly Memorial weekend through September 30th

LIND COMBINE DEMOLITION DERBY

Combine Demolition Derby is the kickoff to Lind's rodeo weekend in June. The event is traditionally started with a "beauty" parade, in which the combines are judged for their looks. The most popular machine is determined by applause. The combines, which must be inoperable for harvest and at least 25 years old, are dolled up with paint and crepe paper and driven into the rodeo arena. The combines are repeatedly run at each other in an effort to disable other combines. The winner of the derby is awarded to the last "man" standing.

Info: 509-346-2759

Reservations: 888-226-7688

The park has 775 acres with 6,000 ft of freshwater shoreline open year-round for camping and day use. Pothole Lakes, for which the park is named, are not actually located within the park; they are about 30-45 minutes away. The park is actually located on Potholes Reservoir (also known as O'Sullivan Reservoir). The reservoir was a result of a huge depression that was formed during Pleistocene flooding (the spreading and recession of continental ice sheets). Then in 1950, with the creation of the O'Sullivan Dam, the water tables rose and the depression was filled, creating Pothole Lakes. The park attracts visitors for a variety of outdoor activities: hunting, fishing, birdwatching, watersports and camping. The park has 61 tent spaces, 60 utility spaces, one dump station, four restrooms, and four showers.

The 5,043-acre camping park has 50,000 feet of freshwater shoreline with two campgrounds and large day-use areas. Located in the heart of the park is its namesake, a 600-acre basaltic rock formation. It is believed that the formation was created during the Ice Age and was originally a large island in the Columbia River. The park offers miles of horse and hiking trails. The park has 26 tent spaces, 136 utility spaces, one dump station, six restrooms, and six showers. There are 12 primitive boat-in campsites. The park is open year-round for camping or day use. Info: 509-632-5583

The 4,027-acre camp park, with 73,640 ft of freshwater shoreline, is located at the base of Dry Falls. A gigantic dried-up waterfall, Dry Falls, is now a 400-ft 3.5-mile-wide cliff. At its peak, it is believed that the waterfall was four times the size of Niagara Falls. Visit the Dry Falls Visitor Center to understand more about how the Glacial Lake Missoula flood affected the region. The park is home to nine lakes, a nine-hole golf course and a miniature golf course and offers boating, hiking, and birdwatching, just to mention a few. The park has 152 standard campsites, 39 utility spaces, one dump station, six restrooms and 12 showers. Winds can be high in the park, so be prepared.
