THINGS TO DO

McARTHUR LAKE WILDLIFE MANAGEMENT AREA IDFG 208-769-1414

1207 acres open year-round, but be informed of special restrictions during nesting season.

McArthur Lake area is located next to the Kootenai National Wildlife Refuge. It is also a home for migrating waterfowl, as well as big game such as whitetail deer, moose, and black bear. The lake allows for great fishing and moose viewing in June. Spring and fall make it the ideal place for birdwatching.

MINERAL RIDGE 208-769-5000

Located seven miles east of Coeur d'Alene on I-90 to Hwy 97 south is a 3.3-mile loop trail that takes hikers from a picnic area to a ridge high above Lake Coeur d'Alene. Shelters and benches offer rest time. A 100-yard side trail leads to a turn-of-the-century prospecting site.

MULLAN TREE

The historic spot and short trail to the tree are marked by a sign on the westbound lane of I-90 at Fourth of July Summit, about 20 miles east of Coeur d'Alene. For eastbound travelers, the site is accessible by exits one mile east and three miles west of the summit.

In 1854, John Mullan, an Army engineer, was instructed to construct a wagon route between Fort Benton, Mont., and Fort Walla Walla in Washington. Among the substantial obstacles was the removal of thousands of enormous trees in the mountains between Cataldo Mission and Coeur d'Alene.

On July 4, 1861, Mullan's men took a break from their backbreaking work and celebrated the holiday in a canyon a few miles west of Cataldo Mission. To mark the occasion, they carved "M.R. (Military Road) July 4, 1861" onto the base of a large pine. Although the tree was blown over in a windstorm many years ago, part of the original message, a simple "Y 4" is still visible on the trunk, which is now displayed at the Museum of North Idaho.

OSBURN FAULT

The fault is located near I-90 from Superior, MT to Coeur d'Alene and is visible on a ridge saddle north of the east Osburn city limits. I-90 follows the fault from Pinehurst to Cataldo.

THE PULASKI TUNNEL TRAIL

The trailhead is located on Moon Pass just outside of Wallace.

A forest fire in 1910 burned three million acres of Northwest forest land. While fighting the massive fire, Edward C. Pulaski and his team of 45 men were trapped between two fire lines. In an effort to save his men, he led them to the abandoned Nicholson mine shaft to wait out the fire. Pulaski was able to lead 39 of his original 45 men to safety the following morning. The US Forest Service has dedicated a two-mile trail leading up to the Nicholson mine to Edward C. Pulaski's heroic leadership and quick thinking. The trail is lined with interpretive signs that tell the story of Pulaski and that fire's lasting effects on forest management, wildlife policy, and responses to the present day. The trail weaves through beautiful wooded canyons where the effect of the forest fire can still be seen.

Q'EMILN TRAILS

TREATY ROCK

In 1871, Frederick Post made a deal with the Coeur d'Alene Indian leader, Andrew Seltice, to obtain 200 acres of the Spokane River. They recorded that cession of land on a prominent rock adjacent to the falls. Treaty Rock Park is a four-acre site located near Seltice Way on Compton St.

WATERFALLS

COPPER CREEK & FALLS

Located off Highway 95 about 1.5 miles south of the Canadian-U.S. border on the Copper Creek Road. The Forest Service maintains a campground with picnic tables, a rest stop and overnight camping along the Moyie River.

The trailhead is a mile up the road. The 15-minute short and easy walk to Copper Creek Falls brings into view falls that resemble a Japanese painting.

MOYIE BRIDGE & FALLS

Located north of Sandpoint on Highway 2, Moyie Bridge spans a 450-foot canyon. From the overlook, get a bird's-eye view of the Bonners Ferry Dam and power generating plant, as well as the Moyie River Canyon and Falls.

MYRTLE CREEK FALLS

One-tenth of a mile northwest of the visitor center at Kootenai National Wildlife Refuge. Myrtle Creek Falls is a good-sized cascade that has continued to erode the native brown quartzites, a combination of prismatic rock and water which brings forth a spectacular and enjoyable rainbow display. There are two Myrtle Creek Falls Trails; the newer one is fully ADA compliant. The trails are very short (about 0.2 miles) but very steep and end at an observation point halfway up the falls, which provides an exceptional view.

SHADOW FALLS

While the trip takes a bit of back-road driving, the hike is short and scenic. Take I-90 to the Enaville Exit west of Kellogg. Drive 23 miles on the Coeur d'Alene River Road to Prichard, then drive on Forest Service Road 298 for 14.4 miles to Yellow Dog Road 513. Go two miles to the switchback marking FSR 1568 for about a mile to Trail 513. The trail offers a view of a scenic 20- to 25-foot waterfall cascading over a moss-covered rock face. A split-log footbridge with rustic log rails crosses the creek below the falls, allowing hikers access under and behind the waterfall.

SMITH CREEK FALLS

Highway 95 and Highway 1 north, then via Copeland Rd to Westside Rd. The Falls are on private property, so please observe from the county road.

SNOW CREEK FALLS

Snow Creek is fed by Snow Lake, a pretty alpine lake, and about a dozen ice-cold creeks. Springs abound, and the flow is year-round, though somewhat diminished in the summer and early autumn. Snow Creek Falls is actually a pair—the upper, which is more impressive, and the lower, which tries hard to match its upstream sibling.

The trail to the viewing areas is almost a mile but features boardwalks over the challenging areas. It is a very easy stroll going down. Coming back to the road, it's an extended uphill climb, but benches have been provided for resting. It is a beautiful walk, and the views of the waterfalls are worth the effort.
